Meſſieurs HALL and SELLERS,

The following extracts from Colonel Hamilton's letter to the citizens of New-York are ſo extremely applicable to the preſent ſtate of Pennſylvania, that you will oblige many of your cuſtomers, by giving it a place in your paper. The ſentiments contained in it are addreſſed to all—but chiefly to the LEGISLATURE of the ſtate, by a FRIEND TO EQUAL LIBERTY.

WHILE not only every perſonal artifice is employed by a few heated and inconſiderate ſpirits, to practiſe upon the paſſions of the people, but the public papers are made the channel of the moſt inflammatory and pernicious doctrines, tending to the ſubverſion of all private ſecurity and genuine liberty; it would be culpable in thoſe who underſtand and value the true intereſts of the community to be ſilent ſpectators. It is, however, a common obſervation, that men, bent upon miſchief, are more active in the purſuit of their object, than thoſe who aim at doing good. Hence it is in the preſent moment, we ſee the moſt induſtrious efforts to violate the conſtitution of this ſtate, to trample upon the rights of the ſubject, and to chicane or infringe the moſt ſolemn obligations of treaty; while diſpaſſionate and upright men almoſt totally neglect the means of counteracting theſe dangerous attempts. A ſenſe of duty alone calls forth the obſervations which will be ſubmitted to the good ſenſe of the people in this paper, from one who has more inclination than leiſure to ſerve them; and who has had too deep a ſhare in the common exertions in this revolution, to be willing to ſee its fruits blaſted by the violence of raſh or unprincipled men, without at leaſt proteſting againſt their deſigns.

The perſons alluded to, pretend to appeal to the ſpirit of Whiggiſm, while they endeavour to put in motion all the furious and dark paſſions of the human mind. The ſpirit of Whiggiſm is generous, humane, beneficent and juſt. Theſe men inculcate revenge, cruelty, perſecution and perfidy. The ſpirit of Whiggiſm cheriſhes legal liberty, holds the rights of every individual ſacred, condemns or puniſhes no man without regular trial and conviction of ſome crime, declared by antecedent laws, reprobates equally the puniſhment of the citizen by arbitrary acts of legiſlature, as by the lawleſs combinations of unauthoriſed individuals:—While theſe men are advocates for expelling a large number of their fellow-citizens unheard, untried; or if they cannot effect this, are for diſfranchiſing them, in the face of the conſtitution, without the judgment of their peers, and contrary to the law of the land.

Nothing is more common than for a free people, in times of heat and violence, to gratify momentary paſſions, by letting into the government, principles and precedents which afterwards prove faral to themſelves. Of this kind is the doctrine of diſqualification, diſfrachiſement and baniſhment by acts of legiſlature. The dangerous conſequences of this power are manifeſt. If the legiſlature can diſtranchiſe any number of citizens at pleaſure by general deſcriptions, it may ſoon confine all the votes to a ſmall number of partizans, and eſtabliſh an ariſtocracy or an oligarchy; if it may baniſh at diſcretion all thoſe whom particular circumſtances render obnoxious, without hearing or trial, no man can be ſafe, nor know when he may be the innocent victim of a prevailing faction. The name of liberty, applied to ſuch a government, would be a mockery of common ſenſe.

The Engliſh Whigs, after the revolution, from an overweening dread of popery and the Pretender, from triennial, voted the parliament ſeptennial.—They have been trying ever ſince to undo this falſe ſtep in vain, and are repenting the effects of their folly in the overgrown power of the new family. Some imprudent Whigs among us, from reſentment to thoſe who have taken the oppoſite ſide (and many of them from worſe motives) would corrupt the principles of our government, and furniſh precedents for future uſurpations on the rights of the community.

Let the people beware of ſuch Counſellors.—However a few deſigning men may riſe in conſequence, and advance their private intereſts by ſuch expedients, the people, at large, are ſure to be the loſers in the event, whenever they ſuffer a departure from the rules of general and equal juſtice, or from the true principles of univerſal liberty.

But, ſay ſome, to ſuffer theſe wealthy diſaffected men to remain among us will be dangerous to our liberties; enemies to our government, they will be always endeavouring to undermine it and bring us back to the ſubjection of Great-Britain. The ſafeſt reliance of every government is on mens intereſts. This is a principle of human nature, on which all political ſpeculation, to be juſt, muſt be founded. Make it the intereſt of thoſe citizens, who, during the revolution, were oppoſed to us, to be friends to the new government, by affording them not only protection, but a participation in its privileges, and they will undoubtedly become its friends. The apprehenſion of returning under the dominion of Great-Britain is chimerical; if there is any way to bring it about, the meaſures of thoſe men, againſt whoſe conduct theſe remarks are aimed, lead directly to it. A diſorderly or a violent government may diſguſt the beſt citizens, and make the body of the people tired of their Independence.

The embarraſſed and exhauſted ſtate of Great-Britain and the political ſyſtem of Europe, render it impoſſible for her ever to re-acquire the dominion of this country.—Her former partizans muſt be convinced of this, and abandon her cauſe as deſperate. They will never be mad enough to riſk their fortunes a ſecond time in the hopeleſs attempt of reſtoring her authority; nor will they have any inclination to do it, if they are allowed to be happy under the government of the ſociety in which they live.

To make it practicable, if they ſhould be ſo diſpoſed, they muſt not only get the government of this, but of the United States into their hands. To ſuppoſe this poſſible, is to ſuppoſe that a majority of the numbers, property and abilities of the United States has been and is in oppoſition to the revolution. Its ſucceſs is a clear proof that this has not been the caſe; and every man of information among us, knows the contrary.—The ſuppoſition itſelf would ſhow the abſurdity of expelling a ſmall number from the city, which would conſtitute ſo inſignificant a proportion of the whole, as, without diminiſhing their influence, would only increaſe their diſpoſition to do miſchief. The policy in this caſe would be evident, of appealing to their intereſts rather than to their fears.

Nothing can be more ridiculous than the idea of expelling a few from this city and neighbourhood, while there are numbers in different parts of this and other ſtates, who muſt neceſſarily partake in our governments, and who can never expect to be the objects of animadverſion or excluſion. It is confirming many in their enmity and their prejudices againſt the ſtate, to indulge our enmity and prejudices againſt a few.

The idea of ſuffering the Tories to live among us under diſqualifications, is equally miſchievous and abſurd. It is neceſſitating a large body of citizens in the ſtate to continue enemies to the government, ready, at all times, in a moment of commotion, to throw their weight into that ſcale which meditates a change, whether favourable or unfavourable to public liberty.

Viewing the ſubject in every poſſible light, there is not a ſingle intereſt of the community but dictates moderation rather than violence. That honeſty is ſtill the beſt policy; that juſtice and moderation are the ſureſt ſupports of every government, are maxims which, however, they may be called trite, are at all times true, though too ſeldom regarded, but rarely neglected with impunity.

Were the people of America with one voice to aſk, What ſhall we do to perpetuate our liberties and ſecure our happineſs? The anſwer would be, GOVERN WELL, and you have nothing to fear either from internal diſaffection or external hoſtility. Abuſe not the power you poſſeſs, and you need never apprehend its diminution or loſs. But if you make a wanton uſe of it, if you furniſh another example, that deſpotiſm may debaſe the government of the many as well as the few, you, like all orhers that have acted the ſame part, will experience that licentiouſneſs is the fore-runner to ſlavery.

How wiſe was that policy of Auguſtus, who, after conquering his enemies, when the papers of Brutus were brought to him, which would have diſcloſed all his ſecret aſſociates, immediately ordered them to be burnt. He would not even know his enemies, that they might ceaſe to hate when they had nothing to fear.

How laudable was the example of Elizabeth, who, when ſhe was transferred from the priſon to the throne, fell upon her knees, and thanking Heaven for the deliverance it had granted her from her bloody perſecutors, diſmiſſed her reſentment. "This act of pious gratitude, ſays the hiſtorian, ſeems to have been the laſt circumſtance in which ſhe remembered any paſt injuries and hardſhips. With a prudence and magnanimity truly laudable, ſhe buried all offences in oblivion, and received with affability even thoſe, who had acted with the greateſt virulence againſt her." She did more—ſhe retained many of the oppoſite party in her councils.

The reigns of theſe two ſovereigns are amongſt the moſt illuſtrious in hiſtory. Their moderation gave a ſtability to their government, which nothing elſe could have effected. This was the ſecret of uniting all parties.

Theſe ſentiments are delivered to you in the frankneſs of conſcious integrity, by one who feels that ſolicitude for the good of the community, which the zealots, whoſe opinions he encounters, profeſs; by one who purſues not as they do, the honour or emoluments of his country; by one who, though he has had, in the courſe of the revolution, a very confidential ſhare in the public councils, civil and military, and has as often at leaſt met danger in the common cauſe, as any of thoſe who now aſſume to be the guardians of the public liberty, aſks no other reward of his countrymen, than to be heard without prejudice, for their own intereſt.

LONDON.

Dec. 1. On Friday evening, about nine o'clock, the celebrated Paul Jones arrived in town from Paris, with diſpatches from the American Congreſs, for his Excellency John Adams, Eſquire. Mr. Jones was only 22 days on his paſſage from Philadelphia to France; and after delivering his diſpatches on Friday evening, he ſet out the next morning at three o'clock, for Paris, to proceed from thence to America.

Dec. 2. The call of the Houſe (ſays a correſpondent) will conſiderably increaſe Mr. Fox's majority, by bringing up the country gentlemen, who hold commercial Nabob and Rajah plunderers in utter abhorrence.

Dec. 15. In conſequence of the authentic information communicated by Tueſday's Gazette, nothing could exceed the indignation of the impartial public, at the miſerable deception which had been attempted by the faction who write in behalf of the Eaſt-India delinquents. What a picture of diſcord, rapine and confuſion! Settlement againſt ſettlement! Generals accuſing their armies! Governors accuſing their Generals. The King's troops, and thoſe of the Company at open enmity! The Princes of the country breaking treaties with us after our own example! Towns taken and ſold again, commanders holding up treaſures and jewels to the eyes of their ſoldiers, and then falling to loggerheads about dividing the booty! While Typpo, with an hundred thouſand fighting men, is carrying all before him, and appears indeed likely to prove the deciſive avenger of his country.

O wretched ignoble Britain! Thy ſon of glory begins to ſet indeed! Thy weſtern empire is gone! Ireland has deſerted thee, and now a few cant words and a little popular jargon is to fright us from attempting to ſave the one jewel we have left! The ſingle prop of our declining greatneſs! And the only remaining reſource, from which the ſhattered revenues of this country can look for a diſtant relief. But, thank the fortune of the day, there is ſomething of vigour and determination in our Miniſters. Let them proceed with firmneſs, notwithſtanding the clamour of culprits, and the tricks of faction; the nation is with them. Let the men whom they name to execute their plan be worthy of the confidence of the public, and they will fix themſelves in the hearts of all true Engliſhmen.

Dec. 18. The laſt accounts from America ſay, that Congreſs found great difficulty in making the army an adequate ſatisfaction for their late ſervices in the field; part of the officers inſiſting violently on half pay, while others were as ſtrenuous for a commutation, but with neither of which the ſtates ſeemed either able or willing to comply. After a more ſerious and cool deliberation, it was propoſed, that the ſtates ſhould raiſe a fund for the immediate payment of all arrears due to the army, with which they ought to reſt contented, as men who have taken the field in defence of their rights and liberties, in which they had ſo honorably ſucceeded, and not as mercenaries fighting for pay. The event of this propoſal is not yet known.

December 20. To prevent the public from being deceived by the varius liſts that will probably be handed about this day, reſpecting the new adminiſtration, we can aſſure our readers from unqueſtionable authority, that the following are the only arrangements that were decided upon at one o'clock this morning, viz.

Mr. W. Pitt, firſt Lord of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer; Lord Thurlow, Chancellor; Lord Gower, Preſident of Council; Lord Temple and Lord Sydney, Secretaries of State; Lord Howe, firſt Lord of the Admiralty.

To the above it is imagined will be added, D. of Richmond, Maſt. Gen. of Ordinance; Lord Weymouth, Privy Seal; Mr. Dundas (late Advocate) Treaſurer of the Navy; Sir G. Yonge, Paymaſter of the Forces; Mr. Jenkinſon, Secretary at War; Lord Grantley, Chancellor to the Dutchy of Lancaſter; Mr. Kenyon, Attorney-General; Mr. Pepper Arden, Solicitor-General.

Lord Shelburne was ſent to by the King, but has yet given no deciſive anſwer. Lord Cambden declares himſelf friendly to the new miniſtry, yet refuſes to accept any office whatever.

Parliament will certainly be diſſolved, but not till Tueſday night or Wedneſday morning; the land tax bill muſt paſs before ſuch an event takes place, or the nation become bankrupt, as the public annuities are payable on the fifth of next month, and the Treaſury without this Parliamentary aid, be found pennyleſs! Mr. Fox's party, aware of this, were determined to avail themſelves of their majority ſo far, as to go into a "committee on the ſtate of the nation," before the ſaid bill ſhould paſs, knowing that the diſſolution of Parliament would otherwiſe deprive them of the opportunity of declaring more fully to the world their ſentiments on a late extraordinay event.

BOSTON, February 19.

On Saturday laſt his Excellency the Governor received a ratification of the Definitive Treaty of Peace from Congreſs, which, we hear, is ſoon to be proclaimed in the uſual manner.

On Tueſday the Supreme Judicial Court of this Commonwealth was opened in this town: Upon which occaſion the Judges appeared in ſcarlet robes, and the Barriſters in their gowns. There was a large concourſe of reſpectable citizens, who ſhewed much pleaſure with this additional proof of confirmed peace, liberty and law, at the end of a war conducted with ſo much valour and firmneſs, and concluded with ſo much glory. Some Britiſh officers who were in town, it is ſaid, muttered ſome invidious expreſſions on this occaſion, and have ſecreted themſelves to avoid that reſentment, which their impotent malice would certainly have brought on them from a ſpirited populace.

NEW-YORK, February 25.

By letters from England we are informed, that the Betſey, Capt. Watſon, with dry goods, for this port, was to leave London a few days after the Apollo, Capt. Bunyan, which arrived here laſt Sunday: That a diſſolution of the Britiſh Parliament had been determined upon: That the nation was in a ſtate of great diſtraction, ſince the Eaſt-India reform bill (after ſucceeding by a majority of upwards of one hundred commoners) was thrown out of the lords houſe by a majority of ſeventeen votes.

"I ſaw yeſterday the firſt balloon, carrying ſome men, who ſailed truly and without any other ſupport in the air. It roſe to the height of about 3000 feet, and it traverſed, in 20 minutes, a ſpace of 5000 yards, having ſet out from the palace La Meute, and arrived on the new Boulevards, oppoſite the ſtreet St. Jaques. There they deſcended, for it appears they had not the faculty to direct their courſe, but only to riſe and deſcend as they choſe it. They had ſtill two thirds of the materials they were provided with, in order to fill the balloon with new inflammable air; therefore, upon a moderate calculation, they would have been able to go three times farther than they really went, that is to ſay, about ſix ſmall leagues. The wind was weak and northweſt. When they deſcended, they ſaid, that they had never been ſo hungry in their lives, and that they had been aſtoniſhed at the awful ſilence which reigned in the high regions."

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE ſtockholders of the national bank having appointed us, the ſubſcribers, a committee to publiſh their proceedings of this day, and to explain the grounds and reaſons thereof; we take the earlieſt opportunity to give this notice, that they reſolved as follows:

"That the new ſubſcription ſhall be extended to the number of four thouſand ſhares, which ſhall be added to the capital ſtock of the bank, at Four Hundred Dollars for each ſhare, making in the whole five thouſand ſhares, including both the old and new ſtock:

"That the old, or firſt ſtockholders, ſhall divide the profits of the bank to this day:

"That thoſe who have purchaſed old ſtock ſince the laſt dividend, at an advanced price, upon the aſſurances given that the price of the new ſtock would be held at five hundred dollars, ſhall have the ſum given in advance repaid to them, together with intereſt at the rate of ſix per cent. per annum, on the whole purchaſe money, from the day of the tranſfer, inſtead of the dividend:

"That thoſe who have aready ſubſcibed for new ſtock, at five hundred dollars each ſhare, ſhall be repaid an hundred dollars for each ſhare, together with intereſt at the rate of ſix per cent. per annum, on their whole ſubſcription, from the time of payment to this day, after which they ſhall receive dividend in common with all the ſubſcribers, old and new:

"That all ſtock ſubſcribed for after this date ſhall draw a dividend from the day of ſuch ſubſcription reſpectively:

"That the conſideration of the following propoſition be poſtponed, until ſuch time as ſhalll be named for deciding thereon in a meeting of the ſtockholders, to be called for that purpoſe by the preſident and directors, viz.

"That every ſtockholder, having leſs than five ſhares, ſhall have one vote; every ſtockholder holding more than four and leſs than ten ſhares, ſhall have two votes; every ſtockholder holding more than nine and leſs than fifteen ſhares, ſhall have three votes, and ſo on at the ſame rate; being one vote for every additional number of five ſhares, and no more."

The ſtockholders were unanimous in every reſolution, except that for poſtponing this laſt queſtion, and we will now, in obedience to their orders, endeavour to ſtate the reaſons which influenced their determinations.

When at the laſt meeting they determined to encreaſe the price of ſtock in the new ſubſcription, it was done from a conviction, that a ſhare in the bank was reaſonably worth five hundred dollars; and the proof that they judged rightly is, that ſix hundred ſhares have already been ſubſcribed. You will readily perceive, therefore, that they were not influenced by mere conſiderations of private intereſt, in reducing the price on the preſent occaſion. They were actuated by a ſerious conviction, that the intereſt of this ſtate, and of the United States, are deeply concerned in the queſtion, whether a new bank, in this city, ſhould be incorporated? and they firmly believe, that if the meaſure ſhould take place, it would be productive of injurious and even fatal conſequences to the commerce of our country.

The ſtockholders, in taking the reſolution to encreaſe the ſubſcriptions to the amount of two million dollars, at the rate of four hundred dollars for each ſhare, were influenced alſo by the conſideration, that in proportion to the extent of their capital, would be the ability of the corporation to afford aid either to this ſtate, or the United States, and to the commerce of Philadelphia in particular, or America in general; and alſo that by comprizing the money appropriated to this object in one maſs, the operations of the bank would be rendered more ſecure, and the amount of their circulating notes be ſo encreaſed in conſequence thereof, as thereby to relieve the wants of the manufacturer and huſbandman, whoſe neceſſities require ſupplies of money, and who from the preſent ſcarcity have not been able to obtain it on the common terms of legal intereſt.

They conceive, that the experience of other nations and ages will demonſtrate clearly the propriety of their former conduct in aſking an advance in the ſubſcription; and they alſo conceive that the advantages which government may derive from the inſtitution are evidenced, by the aid which the bank has already afforded to the United States during the late war.

The reſolutions for reimburſing thoſe who have ſubſcribed or purchaſed at the rate of five hundred dollars, are founded on ſuch clear principles of equity, as to render any obſervations on that ſubject unneceſſary. 245

That reſolution, the conſideration whereof is poſtponed, you will eaſily perceive to be calculated for the removing of clamors, unjuſtly raiſed againſt the Bank, as being under the undue influence of large ſtockholders. The moſt effectual prevention of it will be found in the great extent of the propoſed ſubſcription; for you will obſerve at a ſingle glance, how improbable it is that ſuch influence ſhould exiſt, when the amount of the ſtock goes ſo far as two millions of dollars.

But if any further precaution be neceſſary, we venture to ſay, that the mode of voting abovementioned, will have a greater effect than limiting the number of votes to twenty; and if thoſe who have raiſed the clamor, are ſeriouſly diſpoſed to prevent that which they complain of as an evil, they will, by becoming ſtockholders, have the opportunity of voting for the adoption of it.

But it may be aſked, why, if the ſtockholders were deſirous of giving ſatisfaction on this point, did they not decide the queſtion in the affirmative? We anſwer, that that the objection againſt coming to ſuch a deciſion was, that it involved the rights of perſons who were abſent, who could not be preſent, and who had not any notice of the agitation of ſo important a queſtion. A majority of the ſtockholders, therefore, conceived it to be a duty to their abſent brethren not to decide without giving the previous notice which is abovementioned.

We are, your moſt obedient and humble ſervants,

THOMAS WILLING,
THOMAS FITZSIMMONS,
JAMES WILSON,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

OFFICE OF FINANCE,

FEBRUARY 9, 1784.

THOSE whom it may concern are desired to take notice, that the United States are held to the payment of monies in Amsterdam and Paris, for the principal and interest of sums borrowed there, which payments will be provided for out of the funds to be granted by the several States, in consequence of the recommendations of Congress in that behalf made; and that, to reduce such payments in Europe to precise sums in America, contracts must be entered into for the making of them. As it is probable therefore that all the States will now speedily assent to the aforesaid recommendations, already adopted by the greater part, the time for proposing such contracts must soon arrive, and consequently the persons who may hereafter incline to offer proposals would do well to obtain in time the necessary informations, and form the proper arrangements with their several correspondents.
